

YOUNG MAN IS SERIOUSLY CUT

PERRY BURLISON RECEIVED PAINFUL BUT NOT NECESSARILY DANGEROUS KNIFE WOUNDS ON HIS ARM.

Perry Burlison, a young white man, was badly cut on the arm, shortly before midnight last night, a long, ugly-looking gash having been inflicted on his arm, which the city physician sewed up after the young man had bled very freely.

The cutting is said to have been done by Louis Crumble, and the police last night could not tell what the trouble was about. Burlison wrapped his wounded arm in a white cloth and walked to the police station, there awaiting the arrival of the city physician, who saw him in the sick ward, and who was compelled to take a few stitches in the cut.

Crumble, charged with wielding the knife, was arrested shortly after the trouble, but was released on bond.

LIGHT OF AUTO SAVED THE HOG

PANTHER WAS GETTING READY TO SPRING UPON PORKER WHEN HEADLIGHT FRIGHTENED ANIMAL AND CAUSED IT TO SEEK COVER.

A real panther story is told in this week's issue of the DeLand News, in the following:

While returning by auto from Indian Springs Friday night, Sheriff Smith and Deputy Jones saw a panther in the road. The panther was just getting ready to spring upon a hog beside the road, when the headlight of the automobile hit him. He looked at the car a few seconds, jumped along the road two or three times, and disappeared in the brush. Sheriff and deputy sheriff were not affected with "panther ague," but neither was looking for game and the animal disappeared before they had a chance to shoot. Sheriff Smith, who was born in the northern part of Volusia county, and who spent his younger days fishing and hunting all over Florida, has seen a number of panthers, but this was the only one he has seen in many years. The panther is perhaps the largest of the cat family, a full grown animal being ten feet from tip of nose to tip of tail, and weighing from 250 to 300 pounds. Forty years ago there were many of them in the woods of Volusia county.

FINE FAT HENS LEFT BY DARKEY

ABOUT A DOZEN AND A HALF CHICKENS WERE DESERTED WHEN STOREKEEPER BROUGHT POLICEMAN'S NAME IN DEAL.

Yesterday morning a negro showed up at Hines Cravey's store, carrying on his back a lot of chickens, which he offered to sell at such a ridiculously low price that the prospective purchaser at once became suspicious that something was wrong. He asked the negro to remain there until "he could get change from Officer Simmons," and that was enough for the darkey—he left the chickens and made for the woods, and up midnight had not called for the fine fat fowls.

The negro stated that he was from what was known as Bear's Landing, and that the fowls were from his own place, but his actions following the mention by the groceryman of the officer's name caused the police to believe that the entire lot were stolen fowls, and that the same were filched from some local roost.

Chief Sanders said last night that he would keep the chickens at the police station, and would hold them until the expected owner should call, identify them and take the property. He believes they had been stolen.

Russia is Mobilizing Her Troops Apparently To Assist Servians

are in close touch with the embassy and are making preparations to return to France for possible service. Information late tonight from St. Petersburg declares the first desire to settle the controversy through diplomatic means is giving place to a decided war spirit and insistence that Serbia be supported in every way.

TO REMAIN NEUTRAL.

Washington, July 25.—In accord with a policy of absolute neutrality should the Austro-Servian crisis develop into war, any attempt by any of the interested powers to purchase American warships would be promptly rejected by the United States. It was pointed out that the recent sale of the battleships Mississippi and Idaho to Greece could in no manner serve as a precedent for the further sale of ships to any European government. Those latter ships were misfits in the American navy and on that account alone congress consented to their sale.

STOCKS DEMORALIZED.

Berlin, July 25.—The stock market here was demoralized today under the impression that Austro-Servian hostilities were inevitable and that intervention of Russia and a general European conflict was increasingly probable. Securities were dumped promiscuously on the market and prices on all sides fell to an extent which had not been witnessed for years. Russian bank stocks and Austrian securities were the hardest hit.

MARTIAL LAW.

Vienna, July 25.—Martial law was declared throughout Austro-Hungary late tonight.

SERBIAN ARRESTED.

Berlin, July 25.—Budapest dispatch to a local paper says that General Radomir Putnik, chief of the general staff of the Servian army, has been arrested by Hungarian military authorities while on his way from Syria, Austria, to Belgrade.

SHELTER WILL PROTECT VETS AT CEMETERY

SHADE WILL BE ERECTED HERE AFTER FOR BENEFIT OF THOSE ATTENDING THE MEMORIAL DAY EXERCISES.

A shelter for the protection of veterans and visitors during memorial exercises on National Memorial Day will be erected at the National Cemetery in future, and for his part in securing the shade, William T. Sherman Post G. A. R. has extended a vote of thanks to Congressman Wilson. The following letters, the first to be received by the second enclosed, in connection with the matter, are self-explanatory.

Editor Pensacola Journal:

Wm. T. Sherman Post, G. A. R., wishes to thank the Hon. Emmett Wilson for his efforts with the war department in behalf of the public who took part in the Memorial Day Exercises from year to year at the National Cemetery, Fort Barrancas.

For the shade that is assured us from noon on and for other work that will be done there for the public good, G. R. Smith, Asst. Q. M., War Department, Washington.

Honorable Emmett Wilson, M. C., House of Representatives, Washington, D. C. July 21, 1914.

My Dear Mr. Wilson:

In reply to the communication of Mr. George W. Johnston, Post Commander of Post 21, G. A. R., forwarded in your letter of the 21st of June, 1914, the receipt of which was acknowledged July 1, 1914, in regard to the erection of shelter to protect the veterans and other visitors during the exercises held at the Barrancas, Fla., National Cemetery, on Memorial Day, you are respectfully informed that the subject has been investigated by this department and steps will be taken before the next Memorial Day to have constructed a temporary or portable covered speakers stand to be placed in the shade where all visitors may be protected from the sun. The stand to be removed at the close of the exercises and stored for future use.

Very respectfully,
DEWEY BRECKINRIDGE,
Assistant Secretary of War.

GERMAN PICNIC AT BAARS PLACE

LARGE CROWD EXPECTED AT OUTING OF THE GERMAN-AMERICAN ALLIANCE TO BE HELD AT HEAD OF BAYOU.

The German-American Alliance will give a basket picnic at the Baars place, at the head of Bayou Texar today, and it is expected that the attendance will be unusually large. Preparations for the affair have been going on for some time and those in charge of arrangements have a fine program for the occasion. Special cars will be run to convey visitors to and from the picnic grounds.

Break at New York.

New York, July 25.—A severe break occurred at the opening of the cotton market this morning under weak cables and reports of further rains over Texas. First prices showed a decline of 18 to 20 points. There was a good deal of liquidation by room traders, but it did not appear that the largest long interests had marketed any considerable amount of their cotton. After prices had declined further to within a point or two of the lowest for the season there was a sharp rally in which about half the loss was regained. This improvement was on cables claiming that the Servians had decided to acquiesce to the Austrian ultimatum under protest and also on private reports that only scattered showers had fallen in Central Texas, where rain is most needed.

New Orleans Futures.

New Orleans, July 25.—Cotton futures opened barely steady: July 13-11; August 12-45; October 12-17; December 12-21; January 12-22; March 12-23.

DETECTIVES SEEK FURTHER EVIDENCE IN BAILEY MURDER CASE; MRS. CARMAN, ENJOYING HER LIBERTY, SURE SHE WILL BE FREED

Freeport, L. I., July 25.—Convinced that Mrs. Carman cannot be convicted unless further damaging evidence against her is introduced, detectives employed in the case are industriously searching for further clues.

In the meantime Mrs. Carman is enjoying her liberty on bail, and asserts her confidence that she will be freed when the case comes to trial.

The grand jury's indictment was based very largely on the testimony of Celia Coleman, a negro maid in the Carman home who swore that shortly after the shooting Mrs. Carman came into the house in a state of unusual excitement. While this testimony is probably sufficient to procure an indictment, it certainly is not strong enough to convict.

The statement of Farrell, the tramp, who said he saw a woman answering to Mrs. Carman's description at about the time of the tragedy, near the window of the Carman home through which the shooting was done, is also regarded as of little value so far as procuring a conviction is concerned.

Two other witnesses before the grand jury whose testimony probably help rather than injure Mrs. Carman's case at a murder trial are Mrs. Helen Corby and Dr. Runcie. Mrs. Corby, a daughter of Mrs. Ida Powell, who is a sister of Mrs. Carman, was at the Carman home on the night of the murder. She says she saw nothing to arouse her suspicions that Mrs. Carman had killed Mrs. Bailey. Dr. Runcie was the first one to be called after the shooting of Mrs. Bailey. He extracted the bullet from the body of the murdered woman. He says he saw nothing to cause him to believe that Mrs. Carman had been responsible for the tragedy.

Friends Think Her Innocent.

The friends and neighbors of the Carmans at Freeport are almost unanimous in their belief that Mrs. Carman is innocent. When asked why, their best answer is only this: "Because she is not the kind of a woman who would do such a thing."

The Carman's friends agree with Mrs. Carman's view, as expressed on several occasions during the past few days, that her only fear for the future is that she may be "framed up" by detectives.

To unprejudiced persons who have followed the case since its beginning her so-called fears sound ridiculous. As a matter of fact, the unprejudiced ones believe she is a mighty fortunate woman not to have been indicted for first-degree murder, in the light of the strong circumstantial evidence and the strong indications of a motive. But, nevertheless, the "frame up" complaint still persists both on her part and that of her friends.

The finding of the grand jury of an indictment in so small a degree as that of manslaughter met with bitter comment from the relatives of the dead woman, much as it pleased the Carmans and their friends. Mrs. Jennie Duray, mother of Mrs. Bailey, said:

"I am out clamoring for vengeance, but I do not believe this woman should be allowed to go free or get off with a fine as she may if she is tried on first degree manslaughter and then found guilty in the second degree."

William H. Bailey, the dead woman's husband, said:

"That is my view, too. I do not wish to question the righteousness of the law officers, but it seems to me that the woman who killed my little girl is going to escape proper punishment."

Bitter Against Detectives.

Mrs. Carman sees no opportunity to call attention to the fact that William J. Barnes was employed by her district attorney, and professes to believe that the private detectives would build up a case against her on pre-judged evidence.

"Do you actually believe," asked a reporter, "that a detective, or two or three or more detectives would deliberately conceal pre-judged evidence to convict you instead of seeking to find the murderer of Mrs. Bailey?"

"Yes, I do," she responded emphatically. "Those private detectives would do anything."

"Did you ever catch Celia Coleman, the colored maid, in a net?" asked the reporter.

"No," replied Mrs. Carman. "She always seemed honest. She was a very quiet girl. But Celia had some trouble with her head. She used to say a mole in her head troubled her. Anyhow you can get a colored maid to say almost anything and everybody knows a detective kidnapped her."

Mrs. Carman apparently believes that she was deprived of her legal rights when she was not allowed to go before the grand jury, and this will form part of her plea when she is brought to trial in September.

"Of course I had a right to appear before the grand jury," she maintained. "Their refusal to hear me was an injustice. Just look who they heard—a colored servant and a tramp—and they wouldn't hear me."

Continuing, she said:

"That Farrell is unworthy of belief. Do you think a tramp like him could have seen what he says he saw and go to New York and get a case of troubled conscience and come back here and tell the sheriff. The idea is ridiculous."

Mrs. Carman also protested against the manner of her arrest. She said it could have been done quietly, but was accomplished in a manner reminiscent of a circus.

AMUSEMENTS

The House of Bondage.

Following a seven week run in New Orleans, supplemented by its initial Broadway appearance Reginald Wright Kaufman's noted "white slave" story, "The House of Bondage" adapted for screen presentation by the Photo Drama Motion Picture Company, is announced as the attraction at the Isis Theatre, for one day only July 28th.

Embodying a moral preachment, interwoven by a story that strikes at the very depths of the evils of the traffic, Mr. Kaufman shows the abuses of its work in the luring of an innocent New England country lass, who becomes, enmeshed in the "web" of New York's "system" and her ultimate destruction. Kaufman handles his theme with remarkable skill, which effaces the least semblance of anything that is tawdry. Its unanimous endorsement by noted sociological and settlement workers including Jane Addams of Hull House, Chicago; Sarah Edwards of St. Mary's Settlement, New York City; together with that of Edward R. Sims, Chicago's former Federal prosecutor, who labored to draft legislation for the abolition of the traffic has added much to its prestige.

The Swamp Fox.

At the Isis today—Francis Marion will be seen in "The Swamp Fox," a three-reel Kalem.

Marauding Cherokees attack the cabin of Jacques Videau, and Francis Marion and the settlers go to the rescue. The family rush into the open and are slain, with the exception of Mary, Videau's ten-year-old daughter. The chief makes her his prisoner. The young leader rescues Mary from the Indians.

Ten years later, Marion returns to find that Mary has grown into a glorious womanhood. He falls in love with her, but because circumstances seem to indicate that Gabriel, his nephew, and Mary are in love with each other, he conceals his affection. Balfour, a young Tory, also loves the girl.

News of Cornwallis' landing at Charleston is brought to Marion. Marion offers the services of his men to General Gates, but he declines. Balfour organizes a band of Tories to ravage the patriot's homes.

General Marion and his men ambush the English, and capture the entire force. Marion also rescues the Continental officer.

Cornwallis sends Colonel Tarleton, known as "The Butcher," to capture the "Swamp Fox." Balfour offers to aid Tarleton.

Tarleton vandalizes the house and makes Mary a prisoner, and then hastens to Marion's camp with his soldiers but warned, the "Swamp Fox" makes his escape. Tarleton charges the girl with being a dangerous spy.

Marion learns of Mary's imprisonment and determines to attack. The "Swamp Fox" surrounds the Mott home. Unaware that the ladies have been driven forth, he sends Gabriel forward with a flag of truce, requesting Tarleton to remove Mrs. Motte, his sister and the children, before he commences the attack. Balfour sees Gabriel, filled with murderous rage, he fires and kills him. Marion orders his men to commence the attack.

Two moments later the surrender of Cornwallis clears the south of the British. Marion comes home. Believing that Mary was in love with Gabriel, he strives to express his sympathy for her bereavement. To his intense surprise, Mary throws her arms about his neck. Knowing him too difficult to propose, the girl pops the question. For a moment the "Swamp Fox" is taken aback. Then, filled with delight, he seizes her in his arms.

In addition three other good pictures will be included.
